BIENNIAL PROGRESS REPORT
to
THE PEOPLE OF FLORIDA

Office of the Secretary of State
1961 - 1962

My Fellow Floridians:

It is with great pleasure and humility that I submit to you, the people of Florida, my first biennial report as your Secretary of State.

While this report is of necessity composed for the most part of an accounting of public officers commissioned, tabulations of election results and the like, it is in a very real sense a report of my stewardship in office during the past two years.

Naturally, as with any new administration, a number of changes have been made in office operating procedures. Each of the changes instituted was dictated by a desire to achieve greater efficiency in the office and to serve you better.

Before presenting a brief resume of some of these changes, as well as the highlights of the past two years, I would like to take this opportunity to express my deep appreciation to my predecessor in office, the beloved R. A. Gray, for his assistance in the difficult transitional period of the new administration. Thanks to Mr. Gray, I was fortunate to inherit a fine and loyal staff and one of the most efficiently run offices in our state government. This greatly simplified the transition to the new administration, and, I am sure, enabled me to do a more effective job than otherwise might have been possible. All Florida owes a debt of gratitude to the Honorable R. A. Gray for 31 years of distinguished service as our Secretary of State.

The past two years have been momentous and busy ones in the office of your Secretary of State. Few departments of Florida's state government have recorded such a tremendous increase in work activity during this period.

These increases can be attributed to two factors—an upsurge in the volume of work handled by all divisions of the office, and new responsibilities assigned the Secretary of State by the 1961 Legislature.

Florida's continued rapid population growth alone does not account for the stepped up activity in the office of the Secretary of State.

And while it is difficult to measure statistically the increase in work output by the office as a whole, a good barometer of growth can be found in the increased revenue collections during the past biennium.

Total revenue collections advanced 29.1 per cent during the two year period. Perhaps the most spectacular growth—41.3 per cent—was registered in the collection of capital stock taxes on corporations. These revenue increases, it should be pointed out, were achieved despite the fact that there was no increase in the rate of fees and taxes collected by the office.

At the same time, Florida continued to run third in the nation in the number of new corporations chartered. During the two-year period, new corporation charters were issued at the rate of better than 1,000 per month. Only New York and California recorded more new corporations duing the biennium than Florida.

The 1961 Legislature was the busiest in history—at least in terms of legislation passed—and the result was that our Laws Division handled a record 3,100 new laws for the session. This compared to 1,995 in the 1959 session and 1,509 in 1951.

Our Notary Public Division also set records. In 1962 alone, an all-time high of 16,142 notary public commissions were issued. This was 494 more than the previous year. By comparison, only 6,638 notary commissions were made in 1950, scarcely a decade ago.

There was a tremendous upsurge of activity by labor unions in Florida in 1962. Our Licensing Division reported that the number of unions registered in Florida increased from 326 to 488 in 1962 over the previous year. At the same time, the number of labor business agents' licenses issued through this office increased from 393 to 492 in the same period.

Our Private Employment Agency Division issued 2,307 licenses to private employment agencies and their employees during the past biennium.

New duties assigned the Secretary of State also contributed measurably to the increase in activity during the past two years.

On July 1, 1961, at the mandate of the Legislature, the Office of the Secretary of State assumed the new responsibility of licensing and supervising private employment agencies. This function formerly had been handled by the Florida Industrial Commission. Discharge of this new responsibility threw a burden on the office staff far greater than that anticipated by the Legislature. The four positions originally authorized for this service proved to be woefully inadequate. The major reason for this miscalculation in staff was that the Deputy Industrial Commissioners throughout the state and their staffs had conducted hearings and performed investigative services in the private employment agency field on a part-time basis incidental to their responsibilities in the Workmen's Compensation area. Hence, the Industrial Commission employees assigned full-time to supervision of private employment agencies did not reflect the amount of manpower needed to discharge adequately this function. As a result, it was necessary for this office to "borrow" employees from other departments in order to do an even passable job. As an example of the burden, the office made investigations on and issued licenses to 1,100 private employment agencies and their employees in 1962 alone. In addition, 1,000 investigations involving private employment agencies were handled during that year.

Because of the tremendous increase in labor activity in Florida, the 1961 Legislature imposed additional investigative responsibilities on the Secretary of State relative to the approval of applicants for labor business agents' licenses. This function entails making detailed character and fitness evaluation and public hearings involving application for labor business agent licenses.

The 1961 Legislature also assigned the Secretary of State the task of compiling and publishing Florida's first Administrative Code and Register. This was a task comparable in scope and complexity to publishing the biennial Florida Statutes. It involved compiling all the administrative rules and regulations of all state agencies possessing rule-making authority. Significantly, this major governmental reform was accomplished on a revolving fund budget for the biennium of only $20,000. Such frugal financing for such a large undertaking was made possible by the decision to make the Administrative Code virtually "pay for itself" through sales to private citizens. The first edition of the Code was published early in 1963, and it is felt that it will compare favorably with any such code in existence. The Code will be kept up to date by publication of a monthly register and quarterly loose-leaf supplements. This progress will require this office to check each new agency regulation for compliance with laws, proper working, style, indexing, etc.

In addition, a number of lesser functions were assumed by the Office of the Secretary of State during the biennium at the request of the Cabinet or other state agencies. These included the following:

— Secretarial responsibilities regarding the commissioning of notaries public, which formerly were handled by the Governor.

— The responsibility of duplicating and multigraphing materials for the Florida Senate and Budget Director's Office, including the volume of the budget recommendations for the 1963 Legislature.

— Maintenance of the grounds of the Executive Residence and the Internal Improvement Building and grounds.

— Supervision of the visitor's parking lot in front of the Capitol Building.

During the past two years, a number of internal administrative changes were instituted in an effort to achieve greater efficiency and higher productivity to accommodate the increased work burden of the office. Among these changes were the following:

1. In line with policies of similar offices and the State Merit System, the work week of all employees in the Office of the Secretary of State was reduced during calendar year 1961 from 44 hours to the standard 40-hour week. Under previous administrations, a majority of employees had been required to work on Saturday mornings in addition to the normal five-day work schedule. This was considered an unfair burden on these employees as well as being detrimental to office morale.

2. During 1961, the personnel structure in the office was reorganized along the lines of the Merit System, with comparable pay and promotion programs. Until this time, the office had no uniform personnel policy, no job classifications and no salary schedule. The new system instituted for the first time complete personnel records and data; strict control over vacations, leaves and compensatory time; and a uniform salary schedule.

3. In 1961, the Secretary of State's office established a Fiscal Division charged with the responsibility of providing careful cash control for the $2,500,000 collected annually in capital stock taxes and other fees. Until that time, mail cash receipts were handled by clerks in the various divisions of the office. This method of handling incoming cash had been the subject of criticism in several state audits. The new Fiscal Division was staffed with trained accountants and equipped with a validator and other modern accounting equipment. Under the revised system all cash goes directly to the Fiscal Division where it is checked and validated before any papers are processed. Further, the Fiscal Division has enabled careful, long-ranged planning of budgets with the result that the office no longer resorts to the practice of requesting sizeable deficiency appropriations during the biennium as was the normal routine in previous years.

4. Early in 1961, a new purchasing system was instituted placing the responsibility for all office purchases under a single Purchasing Director. Previous to that time, several individuals had been authorized independently to buy needed items and services. This resulted in poor coordination in the obtaining of new supplies and services as well as unnecessarily high prices in some instances. Under the new system, a purchase order is issued for each purchase regardless of size, and each order must clear through one person for approval. Wherever feasible, even though it may not be required by law, purchases are submitted for bids. In major purchases, the office works closely with the State Purchasing Commission. New purchasing procedures have resulted in sizeable savings to the office, frequently in excess of 100 per cent of prices paid previously for comparable items.

5. Since many of the forms used in the Office of the Secretary of State were obsolete in January, 1961, a complete revision and updating of all forms was instituted.

6. During the biennium, a new and adequate switchboard system was installed to replace the cumbersome and out-dated method of placing all intra-office calls through a manual operator. The new system permits telephone communication within the office by dialing and has ended the bottleneck on incoming calls to the switchboard. As a result, telephone efficiency has been greatly increased.

7. During the biennium, new filing procedures have been instituted in the Corporations Division. Previously, a conglomeration of files of different sizes and types were used for storing active and dissolved corporation charters. Now the files have been rearranged in numerical order with a subsequent saving in filing space and increased facility in locating charters. In addition, three electric drum files have been purchased and will be placed in operation in the near future. The drum files, containing resumes on all corporation charters and trade names, will enable prompt location of this vital information.

To my mind, one of the most significant changes in the Office of the Secretary of State during the past two years has been in the approach to the Cabinet responsibilities of the office. The philosophy of this administration is that the discharge of these statutory and constitutional Cabinet duties is fully equal in importance to the routine mechanical functions of the office, such as the issuance of corporate charters.

This conviction is based on the fact that under Florida's unique Cabinet system, the members of the Cabinet serve literally as the "board of directors" of our state government, making decisions each week that affect directly or indirectly every citizen of our state. As one of seven men on this Cabinet "board of directors," I feel this responsibility is one that cannot be taken lightly. Accordingly, I have endeavored to study carefully the merits of each item coming before the Cabinet. Obviously, such a burden of research and study of Cabinet matters cannot be borne by one man alone. Hence, members of my staff have been assigned to assist in the performance of this task in addition to helping with the multitude of administrative responsibilities of the office.

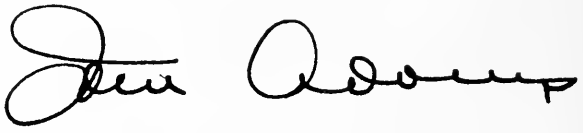
This new approach has resulted, I feel, in more effective discharge of these Cabinet responsibilities by the Office of your Secretary of State.

In conclusion, it has been a busy two years in the Office of your Secretary of State. For me, personally, they have been the most rewarding years of my life.

It is with a sense of pride and deep humility that I submit the following report to you—the people of Florida.

Trusting you will always feel free to call on me for information and proper assistance, and with kindest personal regards, I remain

Sincerely,



Secretary of State

DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS of the SECRETARY OF STATE

Perhaps no Cabinet post in Florida is more widely known—or less understood—than the Office of Secretary of State.

The first law passed by the Legislature when Florida became a state in 1845 created the Office of the Secretary of State, and since that time this Cabinet post has been of prime importance in the operation of Florida government.

The Secretary of State is Florida's second highest elective officer. He is "vice chairman" of the State Cabinet, which acts as the "board of directors" of our state government.

In fact, due to this unique Cabinet system, Florida's Secretary of State probably has more actual constitutional and statutory authority than any other Secretary of State in the nation.

The Secretary of State's duties can be classified into two general categories—administrative and executive.

Administrative responsibilities of the Secretary of State include supervision of state elections; chartering of corporations; licensing of labor business agents and private employment agencies; registering trade marks, and commissioning notaries public.

The Secretary of State is custodian of the important and historic documents of state, including original copies of all the laws ever passed by the Legislature, the journals of the House and Senate and the Florida Constitution. He is custodian of the Great Seal of the State of Florida and the State Flag. He preserves and countersigns all proclamations and directives of the Governor. He is custodian of the Capitol Building and Grounds.

Equally important but less well known or understood are the Secretary of State's executive responsibilities as a member of the Cabinet.

The Cabinet is composed of seven elected officers. The Governor is the "chairman of the board." The Secretary of State is the "vice chairman" and officiates in the Governor's absence. Other members of the Cabinet are the Attorney General, Commissioner of Agriculture, Comptroller, Treasurer and Superintendent of Public Instruction. Each Cabinet member has one vote and a majority vote rules.

The Cabinet conducts its executive business by convening itself into various boards and commissions, each considering a different area of state government. The Secretary of State is a member of 15 of these boards and commissions. For instance, he sits on the Board of Education, the final authority in matters pertaining to Florida's public schools, junior colleges and universities. As a member of the State Budget Commission, it is his duty to assist in guiding state spending within the framework of funds and intent of the Legislature.

The Secretary of State serves on the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, which directs the function of all state institutions, including prisons, hospitals, child training schools and Sunland Centers for the retarded. As a member of the State Pardon Board, he is one of five men who are the final arbiters in determining whether prisoners should be pardoned, paroled or their sentences commuted.

Other Cabinet Boards on which the Secretary of State serves are the Board of Convassers, which tabulates and certifies election results; Board of Conservation; Civil Defense Council; Board of Vocational Education; Labor Business Agents' Licensing Board; Public Record Screening Board; Executive Board of the Department of Public Safety; Personnel Board; State Purchasing Commission; Board of Trustees for the Teachers Retirement System, and the Textbook Purchasing Board.

In these 15 vital areas of government, the Secretary of State exercises tremendous authority far beyond the physical areas of his offices in the southeast wing of the Capitol Building and a branch office in Miami. The decisions and activities of the Secretary of State and his employees affect daily the lives of every citizen of Florida.
